

The BSRIA Soft Landings User Group

www.bsria.co.uk

BSRIA is inviting clients, designers and constructors to become members of the Soft Landings User Group.

The User Group is aimed at companies looking to adopt Soft Landings, or who already have a client who is keen to adopt Soft Landings on an existing project.

BSRIA will run the Group as an open forum where adopters of Soft Landings can work together and share knowledge and experience.

Benefits of joining

The User Group will help you apply Soft Landings on projects where a client is keen to adopt the framework and needs support

It will act as a forum for clients and project team leaders to share experience and learn good practice from other practitioners through:

- free attendance at quarterly briefings and seminars
- involvement in the development of additional Soft Landings guidance, such as reality-checking tools, cost management tools, model contract clauses, and additional worksheets
- half-day project assistance, such as project team facilitation, programming and cost planning

About Soft Landings

Soft Landings is a process for designers and constructors to improve the operational performance of buildings and provide valuable feedback to project teams. In essence, Soft Landings involves:

- Achieving greater clarity at the inception and briefing stages about client needs and required outcomes
- Placing greater emphasis on building readiness, by designer and constructor having greater involvement during the prehandover and commissioning stages
- A resident Soft Landings team located on site during the users' initial settling-in period
- Remaining involved after occupation, during and beyond the defects liability period to resolve outstanding issues.

The aim of the BSRIA Soft Landings User Group is to help and support building project teams and their clients in adopting Soft Landings procedures on live projects. Members will also work within a web community where information and experience can be shared, and provide input to the development and application of Soft Landings guidance.

Members of the Soft Landings User Group will be able to attend regular workshops and meetings, network with other companies using Soft Landings, and learn about energy analysis, occupant surveys and facilitation skills. Soft Landings tools and procedures will be made available as they are modified in the light of user feedback.

Membership of the Soft Landings User Group is open to all organisations working in design, construction and occupation. It will also be valuable to those who understand and apply the principles of whole-life costing and who incorporate sustainability in their corporate social responsibility plan.
